

About Us

Speaking of Research (SR) is an advocacy group that provides accurate information about the importance of animal research in medical, veterinary and scientific research. SR is run by a voluntary committee of scientists and advocates who believe animal research remains crucial to medical progress.

Speaking of Research aims to challenge animal rights dominance of the issue by participating in talks and debates in North America and Europe, and by utilizing web-based communications to organize a network that can give information and support to all who care about medical progress.
